PREFACE

SAGA is a folk opera. Folk music, like folklore, was traditionally handed down to us through performance, minus the use of pen and ink. In setting down this folk opera on paper, I would like to state that the piano and instrumental arrangements should be considered to be nothing more than guidelines to be followed very freely.

It is essential in a performance piece like SAGA that the singers, the actors, the dancers, the musicians, the designers and the directors feel free to weave their own creativity into this opera.

PERUSAL SCORE ONLY
NOT TO BE USED FOR PRODUCTION

Within the score are suggestions of instrumentation: guitars, banjos, mandolin, fiddle, concertina, recorders, harmonica, clarinet, autoharp, bass and of course piano. However, you must tailor these suggestions to your capabilities, availabilities and needs. The more you are able to use singers, actors and dancers who are also instrumentalists the better. The more you are able to use these instrumentalists as an integral part of the staging the richer the tapestry of SAGA will become.

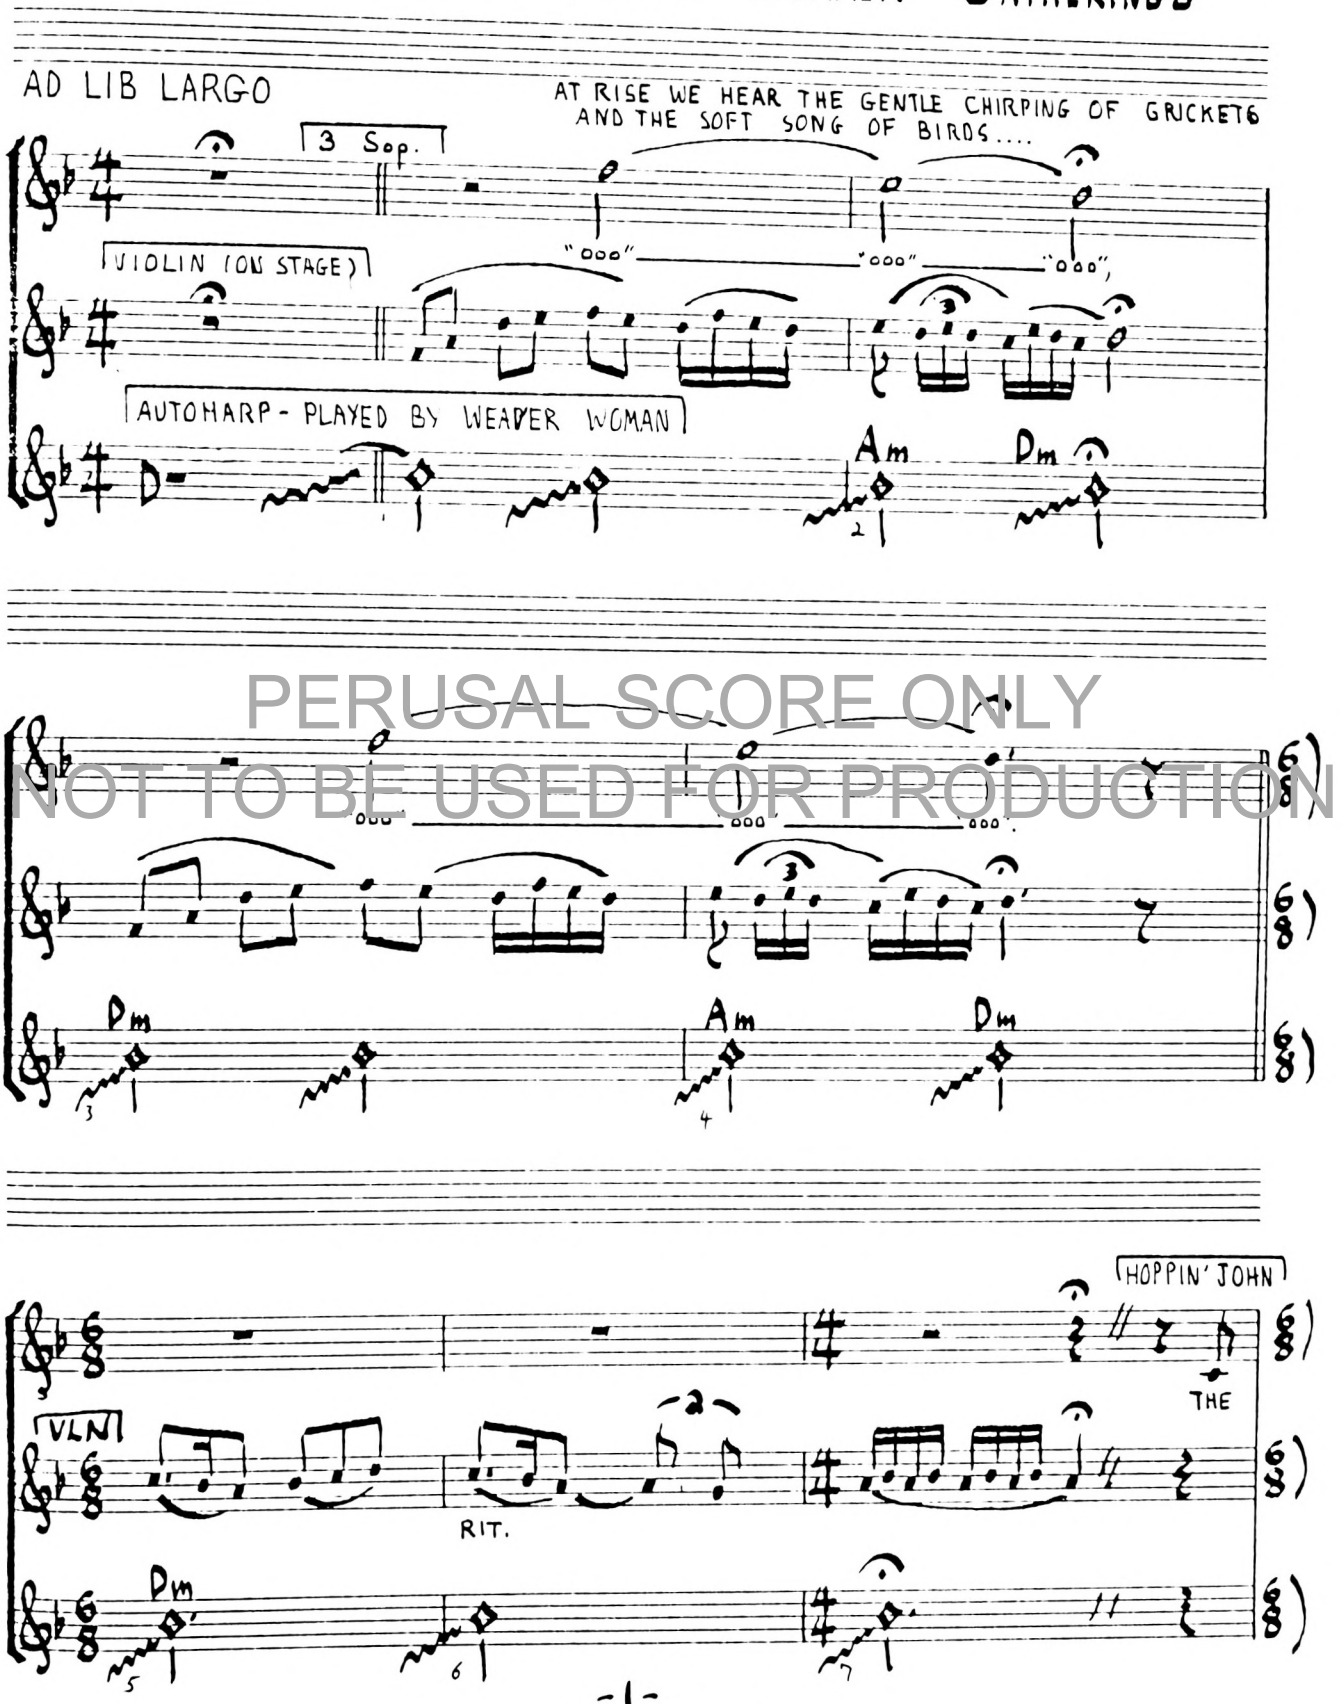

This piano score will be useful as written for rehearsal purposes, but do not be afraid to delete the piano in performance when you find it unnecessary.

Mr Hamilton has written a very beautiful, lyrical and rhythmic score. The piano is needed to punctuate a lot of these rhythms, but the lyrical songs you may find work better with a single guitar. However, the use of the recorders, the harmonica, the concertina and such will be invaluable in the fresh colors they will provide.

In other words … “Come join us in this tapestry.”
